Chapter 1: Introduction

The United States Bowling Congress SMART program began in 1994, offering a centralized location to manage bowling scholarship funds as well as providing USBC members with a resource for inquiries about bowling scholarships. The program disburses youth bowling scholarships in compliance with the United States Olympic and Paralympic Committee (USOPC), National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), National Association Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) and high schools; and in a manner to protect the amateurism of prospective and current student-athletes.

The SMART program falls under the governance of the USBC Board. A governance committee within USBC oversees the SMART program, with sub-committees of qualified individuals. One sub-committee is on the finance side ensuring SMART's safeguarding of funds and prudent investment planning. The other sub-committee is focused on SMART's scholarship use policy.

SMART has a conservative investment strategy with a balanced mix of fixed income and equity investments. SMART uses a third-party investment advisor to provide the investment strategy and all of SMART's financials are audited annually by an independent outside auditor. Some of SMART's investment income is used to cover administrative costs and investment fees. SMART may then allocate an investment distribution as unassigned funds for providers to assign or new recipient scholarships.

The SMART Committee oversees investments and sets policy. USBC staff oversees the day-to-day operation of the program.
