Coffee Beans

Overview

Who doesn't love a hot cup o' joe in the morning? With a coffee fundraiser you can give your donors the caffeine kick they crave while raising money for your cause at the same time.

You'll need to work with a coffee shop or roaster to get discounted bags of coffee grounds or beans to sell. You could also just sell pre-made cups of coffee.

You can set up an online store or sell the coffee in a central location. Either way, your coffee fundraiser is sure to be a hit for donors who need a pick-me-up during their morning commute.

Why We Love It

Coffee is a nearly universally loved beverage. And whether people want coffee beans, pre-ground coffee, or a hot cup o' joe in the morning, a coffee fundraiser can give them what they want!

Plus, if you find the right coffee wholesaler, you'll be able to turn a profit fairly quickly. And if you set up an online store, you can ship the beans anywhere.

A coffee fundraiser satisfies individuals' caffeine cravings and helps your organization raise some extra money. As long as you can get the word out, you'll be able to generate some extra revenue.

How to Get Started

In order to get started with a coffee fundraiser, you'll first need to find a supplier. There might be one in your city, but you can also check online for wholesale coffee roasters and providers.

Then, you'll need to determine where you're going to sell the coffee. Set up an online store attached to your website or sell the beans on a busy (but safe!) street.

Then, get the word out. Promote your fundraiser on social media, within emails, in newsletters, and through traditional methods like newspaper and radio advertisements.

Water Bottles

Overview

A water bottle sale is an ideal addition to your active fundraising events. All you need to do is find a wholesale water bottle company and sell the bottles at a profit.

Alternatively, you could buy water bottles and then obtain a corporate sponsor that is willing to pay for ad space on the water bottles. Then, your donors wouldn't have to pay as much for a bottle!

Why We Love It

Reusable water bottles aren't only a great way to keep your donors hydrated. They're also environmentally responsible and can help your nonprofit raise more money.

Plus, if you sell your water bottles online before your active fundraising event takes place, you increase the chances that more people will learn about your cause and want to donate to your nonprofit.

How to Get Started

First, you'll need to find a wholesale water bottle distributor. If you have one near your organization, ask if they offer any kind of local or nonprofit discount.

Then, you just need to make sure that donors know about your water bottles! You can promote them during active events and sell them in the merchandise section of your website.

Gala

Overview

Galas are one of those fundraisers that require a lot of planning beforehand, but when they're done correctly, they can be a great way for your top-tier donors to get together and raise money for your organization at a glamorous event.

You can sell tables to groups of donors for a set price and offer discounts for purchases of two or more tables.

Galas are also a perfect opportunity to host a silent auction. You can encourage gala attendees and local businesses to donate items or package deals (like a trip to a cabin or a beach house) that attendees can bid on throughout the night.

Make sure you also have a lineup of speakers that can talk about the current and future projects that your organization is working on. That way, gala attendees are aware of what their donations are going toward.

Why We Love It

A gala can be a great opportunity to connect with your donors on a more personal level. Because they're busy mingling with each other, your staff and volunteers have the chance to talk about your organization and your upcoming projects.

Galas are also perfect events if your organization is looking to secure large donations from major gift supporters.

Galas typically aren't cheap events to attend. Tickets are usually hundreds if not thousands of dollars. But some donors decide to give above and beyond the sticker price, adding even more to the night's revenue.

Beyond the monetary benefit of galas, they are great events for giving important updates to donors. If you're kicking off a particular campaign or starting on a new project, a gala is the perfect place to get that info out.

How to Get Started

Galas tend to take several months if not a whole year to plan. First, you'll need to determine where and when you'll host the gala and form a committee to handle all of the particular logistics that come with executing a successful gala.

Then, you'll need to use prospect research to find the most ideal attendees for your glamorous fundraising event.

A donor who has only ever given $10 to your organization probably wouldn't be interested in paying a lot of money for a gala ticket. But a loyal supporter who regularly gives to your cause might be more willing.

Then, you'll need to figure out all of the logistics. Find a caterer. Look for tasteful decorations and chairs and tables. You'll also need to have a few speakers that can highlight the great work that your organization is doing.

Silent Auction

Overview

A silent auction is a great way to bring your donors together for a night of bidding wars, excitement, and fun!

A silent auction is an event that sells off unique items or experiences to the highest bidder. They can differ slightly in structure, but the underlying principle is the same.

The items being auctioned off can be donated by individuals or businesses, but your nonprofit will likely need to actively go after these in-kind donations.

During the event itself, your donors will place their bids with either mobile bidding software or with printed out bid sheets.

At the end of the night, whoever has the highest bid for each item goes home with that item, and your nonprofit goes home with the price they paid for it. Everyone wins!

Why We Love It

Silent auctions can be difficult to plan, but they can be extremely rewarding for your organization and donors.

Donors will likely get excited about bidding on the unique items you've procured, but they'll also be happy that they can donate the money to your organization's cause.

Additionally, your nonprofit gets to learn a little more about your donors. Interacting with supporters at a silent auction strengthens your relationship with them.

Plus, silent auctions are just plain fun. People get to eat, drink, be merry, and win fun and unique items or experiences.

Silent auctions are truthfully one of the best fundraising events out there. They have the potential to generate revenue year after year and are super fun for donors.

How to Get Started

Just like any fundraising event, silent auctions can take a lot of time and effort to correctly plan and execute.

You'll need to determine what kind of auction software you need. If you are going to use mobile bidding software, make sure that your provider offers that option.

You'll also need to procure items to auction off, of course! Ask individuals in your community and some of your supporters. You can also ask local businesses.

Additionally, you'll have to promote your silent auction across traditional and digital communication methods.

Planning a silent auction will take a lot of forethought and preparation. But with the right team members by your side, you should be able to plan a splendid fundraising event!

In-Kind Donations

In-Kind Donations

Companies who don't wish to donate money to a nonprofit may offer in-kind donations of some sort.

In-kind donations are contributions of time, services, or goods that a company can specifically provide. For instance, if your nonprofit is hosting a gala, you might be able to receive in-kind donations for food, decorations, or drinks from local companies.

Charity auction items are another instance of common in-kind donations. Local businesses or individuals will donate items that auction attendees then bid on.

These items can range from art to travel packages to gift baskets and more!

If your nonprofit is looking for items for its next silent, live, or online auction, you'll definitely need to solicit in-kind donations!

<https://doublethedonation.com/fundraising-ideas/>

In-Kind Donations

Overview

In-kind donations are products or services that companies and individuals give to nonprofits.

These types of donations can be extremely useful for fundraising events or large projects. If your nonprofit doesn't have the funds to purchase a piece of equipment or rent a venue for an event, a company or individual can step in and offer their products or services.

In-kind donations can come in all shapes and sizes. Don't overlook them as a viable fundraising source for your nonprofit!

Why We Love It

It's easy to forget that nonprofits can receive their funding in a multitude of ways.

Monetary donations aren't the only kind of funds that organizations need. Some projects and events require products or services whose cost would be exorbitant if not for in-kind donations. Companies can lend their nonprofit partners a hand when it comes to these kinds of donations.

In-kind donations can strengthen the bond between a company and a nonprofit. They serve several different purposes for both parties.

How to Get Started

First, you'll need to determine what products or services your nonprofit needs.

If you have existing corporate connections, ask the person in charge of corporate social responsibility if the business offers in-kind donations of any kind. Depending on the company, the type of in-kind donation that your nonprofit receives could be vastly different.

Additionally, there might be an application or request process before your nonprofit is eligible to receive corporate in-kind donations.

Overview

Panera Bread is known for serving up delicious soups and sandwiches, but did you know they also offer fundraising nights for organizations to raise money?

All you have to do is bring your friends and family as well as a flyer the next time you eat dinner at Panera Bread.

After registration confirmation, an organization receives a customized flyer from Panera. When supporters go to Panera, they must present an electronic or hard copy of the flyer upon ordering.

Panera then donates a percentage of the money raised that night depending on the number of flyers brought in.

Why We Love It

Panera Bread is not only a great place for individuals and families to get a healthy lunch or dinner but their fundraising nights can also help nonprofits and other organizations.

Because people are already going to Panera for meals anyway, it's incredibly easy to execute a fundraising night there.

Plus, your organization can use the opportunity to raise awareness for your cause. People are much more likely to support a cause when they feel adequately educated about that cause.

Use a fundraising night at Panera to get the word about your organization and generate some extra revenue.

How to Get Started

First, you'll need to find a Panera location and make sure that they participate in fundraising nights. If they do, you'll need a 501(c)(3) or W-9 documentation before moving forward.

Then, you will receive a customized flyer. A printed or electronic version of the flyer must be presented upon ordering.

Then, you'll need to promote the event. Obviously, the flyers are one way you can advertise, but you'll also want to use other channels like social media and email.

Keep in mind that Panera doesn't allow organizations to pass out flyers near the restaurant during the fundraiser.

50/50 Raffle

Potential
++

Cost

Popularity
√√

Overview

Many nonprofits will use a 50/50 raffle as an additional fundraising opportunity during a fundraising event.

A successful 50/50 raffle generates revenue for your nonprofit and gives donors the chance to win some serious cash.

During an event, volunteers will go around and sell raffle tickets. The winning pot is then split in two, with half of the money raised going to your nonprofit and the other half going toward a lucky donor.

Why We Love It

50/50 raffles are a great way to supplement the main fundraising that's going on during your nonprofit's event.

But beyond that, it allows your organization to raise a lot of money and incentivize donors to buy more raffle tickets.

Plus, a 50/50 raffle is one of the most inexpensive fundraising ideas out there. All your nonprofits needs to do is buy a roll of raffle tickets and then distribute them during an event. It doesn't get much easier than that.

How to Get Started

Before you start selling tickets, you'll need to decide if the fundraising event you're hosting is a good match for a 50/50 raffle.

If it is, you'll need to sell raffle tickets to your event attendees. You can offer discounts for those who buy multiple tickets.

You'll also need a way to display the amount of money that is being contributed. If donors see that they might be able to win half of a very large pot, they'll begin to buy more raffle tickets, adding to the amount you raise!

Overview

A balloon raffle is a new take on the classic raffle fundraising idea, and it's super easy to pull off!

This kind of raffle works best in conjunction with another fundraising event, usually at family- or children-oriented events.

It works just like a regular raffle, except all of the raffle tickets are placed inside different-colored balloons.

Kids and adults alike will enjoy getting to pop a balloon to get to their raffle ticket, and they'll be even more excited if they win a prize!

Why We Love It

Just like a 50/50 raffle, a balloon raffle is one of the most inexpensive fundraising ideas out there.

If your only overhead is a few packs of balloons and a roll of raffle tickets, you can easily make some extra money during an event.

Plus, your donors get the added benefit of getting a small prize for buying the winning raffle ticket.

A balloon raffle can be a great way to raise a little extra money during your main fundraiser. Try it out during your next event!

How to Get Started

The only materials you'll need to buy for a balloon raffle are balloons and raffle tickets.

Of course, you'll also need volunteers to hold on to bunches of balloons and sell them during your main fundraising event.

You can sell balloons for a small amount and offer a discount for individuals who buy multiple balloons.

Make sure you also have a small prize to offer the winner. It can be a portion of the money raised or a donated item.

Overview

A potluck raffle can be a great way to raise money and introduce people to new foods.

Volunteers make different dishes that attendees then vote for with pre-purchased raffle tickets.

At the end of the night, each dish goes home with whomever had the winning raffle ticket for that particular item.

You can also encourage volunteers to sweeten the pot by including the recipe for their delicious dish.

Why We Love It

A potluck raffle takes a lot of planning, but it's a great fundraising event when done right.

It's also a great way to bring members of your community together for a night of food and fun.

You can even make your potluck raffle an annual event with a different theme each year to draw more people.

Potluck raffles are a fun twist on a traditional raffle, plus supporters get some tasty dishes for donating!

How to Get Started

First, you'll need to set a date and find a venue. Then, put out the call for potluck dishes.

You'll also need to promote the event with traditional and digital communications.

When the day of the raffle arrives, you'll need to have a staff of volunteers selling tickets and watching the dishes.

Make sure that you have a way to announce the winners and get their prizes to them in an efficient way.

Team Volunteer Grants

Overview

If your nonprofit organizes regular volunteer days, you should look into team volunteer grants as a fundraising supplement.

Team volunteer grants are corporate giving programs that reward groups of employees who volunteer together.

When a team of supporters volunteers with your nonprofit, they can apply for a team volunteer grant from their employer.

The employer then distributes a sum to your nonprofit based on how many hours the group of employees volunteered for.

Team volunteer grants are a great way to encourage your volunteers to support your nonprofit monetarily without asking them to donate their own money.

It also encourages groups of employees to volunteer together for a great cause!

Why We Love It

Volunteers are a fantastic asset for your nonprofit. They are on the ground and in the trenches fighting for your cause.

Team volunteer grants monetarily reward those volunteers and allow them to support your nonprofit in another way.

Additionally, team volunteer grants help encourage employees to work together toward a noble, common goal.

Instead of only bonding at their places of employment, individuals can come together to support a nonprofit with time and money!

Nonprofits can benefit from both volunteer time and monetary support. You might even be able to form a volunteer partnership with companies to ensure that you have a strong volunteer base.

Team volunteer grants are beneficial for supporters and nonprofits!

How to Get Started

The easiest way to get started with team volunteer grants is to promote them to your most loyal and supportive volunteers.

You already know that they love working with your nonprofit. Why wouldn't they want to support your cause monetarily?

Unfortunately, many volunteers don't even realize that the company they work for will reward their volunteer efforts.

This is where your nonprofit comes in! If you can properly promote team volunteer grants, your supporters will be able to submit their requests.

Mention team volunteer grants during your volunteer days, but don't stop there! Post about team volunteer grants on social media and mention them in your other communications.

Before you know it, you'll have volunteers and more donations.

Overview

Volunteer grants are the individual version of team volunteer grants.

Whenever one person volunteers with your nonprofit, they might be eligible to apply for a volunteer grant from their employer.

Most volunteer grant programs will have a minimum threshold of volunteer hours that must be reached before an employer will distribute the funds.

Volunteer grants are a great way to supplement your supporters' hours of hard work.

Why We Love It

Volunteer grants are an easy way to receive donations from your supporters.

Volunteers who may be unable to monetarily support your nonprofit can apply for a volunteer grant to supplement their volunteer hours.

Additionally, your nonprofit benefits by having both loyal and supportive volunteers and the funds that their generous employers distribute.

Volunteer grants are just another example of how corporate giving programs can benefit your nonprofit.

How to Get Started

Many of your volunteers won't know if their employers have volunteer grant programs.

Your nonprofit can fix that by properly promoting volunteer grants to your supporters during events and in your communications.

Once your volunteers are more aware of their employers' volunteer grant programs, they will be more likely to submit paperwork and requests.

In no time, you'll start receiving donations from the employers of your most loyal volunteers and supporters.
